

(and, by the way, why are there so many coffee shots or supinating feet?)

I started using Instagram, the app that transforms a dull image into an interesting one, all thanks to its vintage filters.

I remember being very careful not to waste film, it was so expensive.

And then came digital photography, with all its speed and instantaneity.

And then came digital photography, with all its speed and instantaneity.

The ease of "snap and share" today made me think of how different it was just a few years back.
